

Administration Expects Korean Truce In Week

Rhee Announces
'Friendly Understanding' With U. S.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The administration hoped today that a Korean truce can be signed in about a week now that South Korea apparently has decided to drop its threat to defy the United Nations.

The State Department had no immediate comment on President Rhee's announcement that he had reached a "friendly understanding" with armistice envoy Walter S. Robertson.

Officials were optimistic that it would end the dangerous split in the Allied ranks and clear the way for signing of the truce.

Informed sources said a report had not yet come in on today's meeting with the Communists at Panmunjom. But it was learned that one thing that would prevent an immediate signing was a South Korean demand that all Communist prisoners be moved into the armistice zone for exchange.

It was known, however, that President Eisenhower this week for the first time actually authorized Gen. Mark W. Clark to sign an armistice.

Mr. Eisenhower made the decision Wednesday during a series of conferences with diplomatic, military, and White House advisers.

At his news conference the same day he was cautious about predicting how the negotiations with Rhee would turn out. But informed sources said the administration actually knew a week ago that the aged Korean president was relaxing his stand.

In his announcement in Korea, Rhee shed little light on the exact nature of his "understanding," although he did say it was not a "definite agreement" and that a "final decision" would (Continued on Page 12, Col. 6.)

1700 Chinese Are Killed In Battle

SEOUL, Korea — (U.P.) — American artillery and South Korean troops killed 1700 Chinese in a battle of the bulge today while other Americans in the west waged a "blind man's bluff" fight against the Communists in pitch-black caves and tunnels.

Bodies of almost half of a 4000-man Chinese regiment littered the valleys and gullies in front of three outposts in the Kumsong area defended by the ROK Second and Eighth Divisions.

Major Gen. Sam P. Williams, special ROK adviser, said 1700 Chinese died in the savage fighting that started when the Chinese tried to take Finger Ridge, Kean Ridge and another outpost.

"We whipped a lot of Chinese," Williams said. "We whipped them, but they will be back."

Americans groped through caverns and tunnels on the shell-pocked crest at Porkchop Hill and engaged the Chinese in fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

They also struggled with the Reds in bunkers shielded by timber and sandbags for control of the outpost position defending the northern invasion route to Seoul.

In the air, American Superforts droned through intense Communist anti-aircraft fire and glaring searchlights to attack (Continued on Page 12, Col. 8.)

Brighten Up The Corner

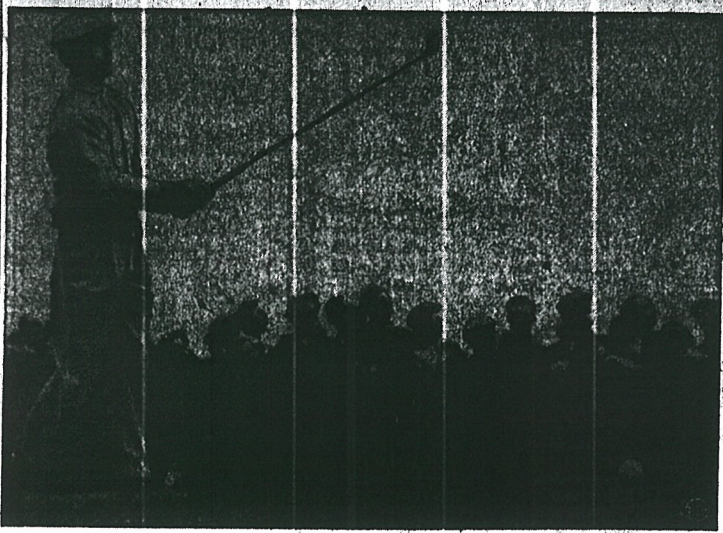

A certain Boston professor was recently visited by the father of one of his students, and inadvertently discovered that the man was a notorious gangster.

The two men chatted pleasantly. The gangster thanked the professor profusely for the help and encouragement he had given his son, and several times intimated that he would like to show his gratitude in a more practical form. But all such offers the professor adamantly evaded.

The gangster was taking his departure, when he made his final pitch.

"With the air of a man getting ready to unlimber a machine gun, he leaned over and croaked in the professor's ear: 'Tell me, professor, are they treating you all right here?'"

WIND NOR RAIN STOPS HOGAN—Blazing Ben Hogan, battling the elements and the star-studded field for the British Open Crown at Carnoustie, Scotland, fired a brilliant last round 68 to cop the title. The Texas bantamweight, making his first try for the British title, shot a 72-hole score of 282 to finish four strokes ahead of the field. Hogan thus became the third man to ever win the U. S. Open and British Open the same year. Gene Sarazen and the immortal Bobby Jones previously copied both events. In photo, Hogan shows part of the 20,000-gallery who followed him how he does it. Immediate Aid For Drought-Stricken Areas Is Promised

President Meets With Governors And Cattle Ranchers

AMARILLO, Tex. (U.P.) — President Eisenhower's quick trip to the drought-stricken Southwest heartened small farmers and ranchers today.

He promised he would sign a $16,000,000 drought aid bill now before Congress and added "we are not going to dilly-dally around until the last cow is dying on the range."

However, many ranchers attending meetings to deal with the drought crisis indicated dissatisfaction with the lack of government price supports for cattle.

Governors of the stricken states, gathered here in an emergency meeting, said they would move quickly to co-operate in a federal-state program.

They also recommended a study of the cattle price supports problem.

Mr. Eisenhower flew to Amarillo Friday to seek the views of governors and representatives of seven states.

He and the governors of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arkansas met in a closed session for two hours. Later, he talked to ranchers and farmers at a public meeting in the Amarillo Municipal Auditorium.

He said he found in his conference with the governors that "there is not complete unanimity of opinion as to exactly what should be done, but we are not going to dilly-dally around until the last cow is dying on the range."

"I do assure you," he told the ranchers, "that we are anxiously and sincerely studying your problems and we do not look upon you as recipients of charity. When the governors get ready to submit their programs, we shall study it and act quickly."

Cherry Picker Is Seriously Injured

Morgan Shellenberger, 171 Smith Ave., today was listed in satisfactory condition in Sharon General Hospital where he is being treated for a fractured pelvis and injuries to a hip socket suffered in an accident at home.

He was standing on a step ladder picking cherries when limbs of the tree gave way and fell on him, knocking him off the ladder.

State Will Pay Paving Cost In E. Side Widening Project

The Pennsylvania Department of Highways has given its nod of approval to a Sharon Traffic Commission proposal that would widen one block of East State St. to make it a three-lane thoroughfare.

Department officials have told municipal heads that if Sharon will move the curb back about three feet between Euclid and Case Aves., the state will take care of the paving costs. This is the normal procedure for the city to pick up the curb and costs from the curb outward and for the highway department to provide the street paving.

The traffic commission made the recommendation to council late last month in a list of three proposals that would ease congestion here. They noted that the additional three feet would provide space for a center lane for cars turning off State St. at two busy intersections.

However, on another commission proposal, state highway officials are studying cost problems on the suggested widening of North West Ave. from the Erie Railroad crossing to the city line. With the Shamung River on one side and Little Creek on the other, the project may be too expensive, they said today. The need for the widening is recognized, but costs of the project may be the determining factor.

Kent Has No Objections To Hearings On Reservoir Bill

Sponsor Of Measure To Open Upper
Pymatuning To Motor Boats Doubts
That Time Remains For Such Action

State Rep. Robert F. Kent, Meadville Republican, today offered no objections to public hearings on his bill opening the upper section of Pymatuning Reservoir to motorboats, but he expressed doubt any could be arranged.

"I don't think there's time enough before the House (of Representatives) adjourns this session," Kent said. Final adjournment is now scheduled by the lawmakers for late this month or early next.

The Crawford County Republican leader offered his comment as opposition to the bill which also would establish an eight mile speed limit on the reservoir, mounted here. Demands for public hearings was only one facet of the opposition.

Introduced three weeks ago by Kent, the bill now is on a postponed second reading calendar in the House awaiting amendments which the author said will eliminate the speed limit and return control of movement of boats on the body of water to the present horsepower limit system.

Kent dismissed this section of the bill as "no good" because of the difficulty of determining the speed of moving motorboats.

"You can't measure speed on any body of water," he declared. The bill made its appearance after the outbreak of the Korean war. The bill applies retroactively to July 1 when the law expired.

Senate leaders in both parties expected the bill to whiz through the Senate, perhaps without amendment, within a few days. The finance committee, which handles the measure, may act without holding the usual public hearings.

The bill passed the House nearly two months after it was requested by Mr. Eisenhower as part of a four-point tax program. Passage came only after a long and bitter fight by Chairman Daniel A. Reed (R-N.Y.) of the House Ways and Means Committee.

House Republican leaders blasted the bill from Reed's committee last Wednesday only after showing that they could by-pass the committee to force the measure onto the floor.

Reed, who had insisted the bill violated GOP tax-cutting pledges, issued a statement after the vote calling the action "a serious defeat for the American people."

Detour To Go On Route 19 July 22

A four-mile detour between Wexford and Warrendale on U. S. Route 19 will be put into effect July 22, the state highways department announced today.

The temporary route will take traffic through Bradford Woods. The detour of traffic is required by a construction job involving the widening of the highway to four lanes. The section will be the final link in a new four-lane system extending from Pittsburgh to Zelienople.

Gov. Fine Will Get Sales Tax Bill Monday

Executive's Signature
Assured; Levy Effective Sept. 1

HARRISBURG — (U.P.) — The one per cent sales tax bill will reach the desk of Gov. John S. Fine next Monday.

The signature of the governor on the controversial measure was assured, since he has been a consistent advocate of a broad base tax as the only sound solution to the state's fiscal problems.

The final legislative hurdle was cleared Friday when the Senate, by a straight party vote of 32-18, passed the House-approved measure. Senate Democrats, like their party colleagues in the House, voted solidly in opposition.

Beginning next Sept. 1, the tax will hit Pennsylvanians in every walk of life but exemptions will help ease the burden—especially for the average worker.

But one thing is certain—the consumer must pay the tax—the act specifically forbids the retailer to absorb it. And violators would be subject to a fine of $1000 and a one-year jail term.

In order to obtain the necessary votes for its passage, sponsors of the sales tax added clothing, shoes and meals served in hotels and restaurants to an already lengthy list of exempted items which included: "Food, cigarettes, liquor and beer, gasoline and other motor fuels, newspapers and magazines, medical prescriptions, artificial limbs and disability devices, crutches, wheelchairs, eyeglasses, false teeth, dentures, professional services and supplies used in farm production. Not included, however, (Continued on Page 12, Col. 3.)

Farrell Man Is Killed In His Car

Steve Puhala, 33, of 1005 Roemer Blvd., Farrell, was instantly killed about 6:30 p. m. yesterday when his car rolled over on him after going out of control on a highway near Hiram, O.

The Ohio Highway Patrol at Kent, O., said Puhala, traveling westward and alone, was thrown out of the car and beneath it as it flipped end over end and then rolled against a utility pole. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Robinson Memorial Hospital in Ravenna, O.

Scene of the accident was Ohio Route 82 less than a mile east of Hiram. Police said excessive speed apparently caused the Farrell motorist to lose control of the car on the straight and level section of the highway.

Hospital attendants said Puhala suffered multiple injuries in the crash, any one of which could have been fatal.

Big Three Foreign Ministers Seek Accord On Proposal To Call Parley With Soviets

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — The Big Three foreign ministers sought today to iron out their reported differences on whether to propose top level talks with the Russians during the current wave of Kremlin-satellite unrest.

Joint strategy to exploit the crisis facing the Russian leaders in Eastern Germany also was discussed for study at the second round of three-power meetings.

Predictions were that the Big Three would move soon to step up the diplomatic offensive against the Soviets by proposing plans for getting free elections throughout Germany.

President Eisenhower struck a blow Friday night by offering $15,000,000 worth of American food to Eastern Germany if Moscow will open the Iron Curtain enough to let it through.

The Allied diplomats agreed at their first meeting Friday that it was too early to assess accurately the dramatic downfall of Soviet Police Chief Lavrenti P. Beria from the No. 2 post in the Kremlin.

But they faced up to the possibility that his ouster might mean an end to the honey-toned peace offensive that has developed since the death of Stalin. This could plunge the Allies to a new round of rearmament.

On the question of Big Four talks in the near future, British Acting Foreign Secretary Lord Salisbury was understood to have admitted that the firing of Beria had injected a new factor into Britain's off-voiced hopes for face to face talks with the Russians. But he held to the position that a four-power parley should be held at the proper time.

Russian Case Against Beria Almost Ready

Purged Leader To Go On Trial For His Life Soon

MOSCOW — (U.P.) — The case against purged Soviet Police Chief Lavrenti P. Beria is nearing completion and he may go on trial soon for his life in the Supreme Court, diplomatic sources said today.

There is increasing belief that Beria has been under arrest for several weeks—probably before he failed to show up for a gala opera premiere at the Bolshoi theater June 26.

It is noted also that for several weeks the newspapers have been saying no leader can stand above the Communist Party, and have stressed repeatedly the collective character of the party and the government.

Foreign observers believe Soviet foreign and domestic policies, as outlined since Premier Georgi M. Malenkov assumed office, will remain unchanged by Beria's arrest.

A United Press London dispatch said it was reported that Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik, who returned there unexpectedly Friday from Moscow, has instructions to tell the British government that the Kremlin's "peace offensive" policy remains unaltered.

Foreign observers, in expressing belief that there will be no foreseeable policy change, argued that Beria's activities as outlined by the leading Communist Party newspaper Pravda consisted precisely of sabotaging these policies.

"He hatched plans to grab the leadership of the party and the country with the aim of actually destroying the Communist Party and to change the policy elaborated by the party to a capitulatory policy which would have brought about ultimately the restoration of capitalism," the newspaper said.

Pravda also accused Beria of opposing efforts of the new Soviet government to introduce universal respect for law and order by insisting on the use of arbitrary police power. He was charged also with encouraging bourgeois nationalism and sabotaging the collective farm policy.

A leading editorial in today's Pravda said the whole Soviet people and the Communist Party condemn Beria's "criminal actions" with one voice.

Pravda devoted an entire page to reports of mass meetings held throughout the Soviet Union to approve the actions taken by the government and to denounce Beria as "a base, contemptible, traitor, provocateur, hireling of foreign imperialists and hardened enemy of the people."

An editorial similar to that in Pravda also was carried by the official government newspaper Izvestia.

Izvestia, in addition, carried a sharp attack on the Western Big Three foreign ministers conference now under way in Washington.

The newspaper asserted the United States was forced to call the meeting because of the "bankruptcy of the policy of REPLACES BERIA—A Tass News Agency broadcast, monitored in London, said that Sergei Nikiforovich Kruglov, above, has been appointed to succeed Lavrenti Beria as head of Russia's secret police. Beria has been fired from the Soviet Communist Party as an enemy of the party and Soviet people.

U. S. Offer Seen As Master Stroke In The Cold War

Any Decision By Russia May Lead To
Loss Of Prestige

BONN, Germany (U.P.) — West German and Allied officials today hailed President Eisenhower's offer of food to hungry Germans under Soviet domination as a master-stroke in the cold war against communism.

These authorities said the offer to send $15,000,000 worth of American food to East Germany came at a strategic moment. The Soviets now have been maneuvered into a position where any decision they make may well lead to a serious loss of prestige, these observers said.

If the offer is rejected, it will fan the smoldering unrest which has stalked the Communist world since the bloody East German uprisings.

If the offer is accepted, it will deliver a damaging blow to the Soviet "hate America" campaign which has been the cornerstone of Communist policy.

West Berlin's Lord Mayor Ernst Reuter enthusiastically endorsed Mr. Eisenhower's actions.

"It is just the right step at the right moment," he said. "The people in East Germany must be informed that free people throughout the world want to help them."

Other German officials also expressed strong approval.

One said the people in Soviet-occupied Germany "desperately need any additional food they can get. For this reason the President's action is a great humanitarian gesture."

"But it is also a wise political step, because it will show the people of East Germany who their real friends are, whether or not the generous offer is accepted," the official said.

Driver Is Arrested Following Collision

Oliver C. Kelly, R. D. 1, Harrisville, faced a hearing today before Justice of the Peace Thomas McClain of Mercer on a drunken driving charge. He was arrested last night by state police after his car sideswiped a machine driven by James H. Lewis of 1408 Glenwood Dr., Sharon.

The accident happened on Route 62, six miles east of Sharon. Kelly, who failed to stop after striking the Lewis car, was nabbed a short time later while driving near Mercer.

State police said they also may file a hit and run charge against him.

Damage to the Lewis car amounted to about $75. Kelly's damage was slightly less.

Mass Use Of Gamma Globulin Begins In N. Y.

Similar Project Is Successful In Montgomery, Ala.

ELMIRA, N. Y. (U.P.)—Some 35,000 children, ranging from infants to nine-year-olds, lined up today for the greatest mass injections of gamma globulin to date in the fight against polio.

More than 2000 doctors, dentists, nurses and lay volunteers manned 23 emergency clinics in two counties where 58 children already have been stricken by poliomyelitis.

Baby carriages and strollers were bumper to bumper outside the clinics long before the injections were scheduled to begin at 9 a. m., e. d. t.

Worried parents amused their children with toys and comic books while they waited for the serum, which might protect their loved ones from the paralyzing effects of the dread disease.

Residents in the two-county area reported in alphabetical order with the youngsters in surprisingly orderly fashion. Their main interest was the serious business at hand and many a skeptical face was seen after the children were close enough to watch the 35,000 needles and 18,000 syringes in action.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (U.P.)—Montgomery County residents rejoiced today over indications that their mass inoculation of 32,000 children with gamma globulin has broken the grip of a polio outbreak here.

Health officials announced the gigantic task of providing the serum for every child under 10 years already has reduced the number of polio cases here and promises to lessen the crippling effects.

An emergency was declared here when the number of cases rose to 79, and the rate climbed to 27 cases in one 10-day period. Since mass inoculation was completed a week ago there have been only six cases.

Photographer Plans Cross-Country Skate

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (U.P.)—Ralph Willett, a New York photographer who hopes to get from coast to coast on roller skates next fall, was denied access to Indiana highways today.

State Highway Commissioner Albert J. Wedeking said Willett could make U. S. Highway 6 useless to traffic for 15 hours as he skated 150 miles from Butler, Ind., to Hammond, Ind.

One skater couldn't compete with the 7000 cars and trucks which sometimes cram portions of the road, Wedeking said.

Willett hopes to start his skatathon next September.

Man, Here's A Clock That's Really Cuckoo! Train Hits Car

BROOKLYN, N. Y. (NEA)—Around Coney Island these days, every man, woman and child is a clock-watcher. That's because they've got a clock to watch that is a dilly, even for Brooklyn.

This is the Guinness Crazy Clock, or a reasonable facsimile thereof. The original is in England, where it was the hit of the Festival of Britain. A replica was built and dispatched Brooklynward as a good-will gesture, and this is the clock that is startling the mainstays out of Brooklyn.

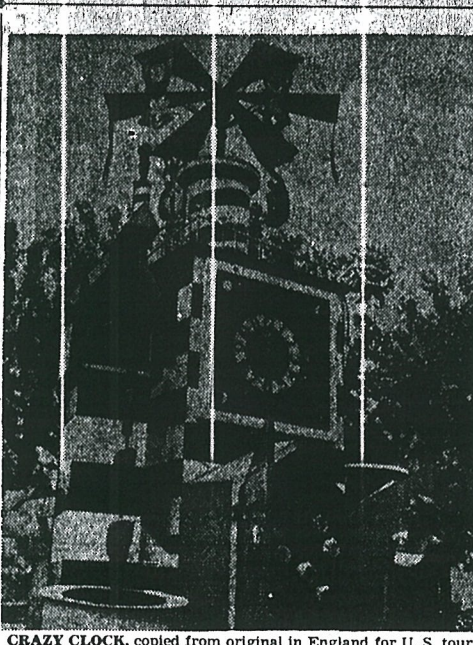

The Crazy Clock's craziest feature is its show. Every 15 minutes, it presents a four-minute theatrical performance. All sorts of things happen, including, but not limited to, the following:

An ostrich pops out of a chimney. A zookeeper springs out of a well and, for some reason, starts ringing a bell. The doors open and a bunch of toucans (fruit-eating birds of tropical America, family Ramphastidae) dance around a tree trunk. A fisherman leans out of a house, and proceeds to catch four fish, which swallow each other. Marionettes revolve around the top of the clock. A Swiss music box plays Swiss music.

After four minutes, everything stops—the ostrich goes back; the zookeeper; the toucans cease dancing; the fisherman calls it a quarter-hour; the marionettes stop marionetting; and the music box calms itself.

For 11 minutes, all that happens is that time is kept. Then, off they go again. Dig that crazy clock.

The clock that will tour America cost $50,000 to build, and has an electrical engineer on 24-hour call. He's Philip Scherer, who went to London and watched while the replica was built.

CRAZY CLOCK, copied from original in England for U. S. tour, performs antics like this every 15 minutes, also tells time.

Scherer knows every mad quirk to the Crazy Clock's make-up. And there's plenty of complicated insides to the two-ton timekeeper. There are 14 motors, for one thing. These control the operations of the ostrich, toucans, etc., through a series of cams on the main shaft.

The whole business is made out of aluminum and nylon, since it will mostly stand out-of-doors. It's 23 feet high, 14 feet long and six feet deep. A special trailer is being built, to haul

Train Hits Car Killing 3 Youths

CORAOPOLES, Pa. (U.P.)—Three youths were killed and a fourth was critically injured early today when a Chicago-bound passenger train crashed into an automobile at a railroad crossing here.

The dead were identified as Donald J. Harvey, 20, R. D. 3, Coraopolis, Evelyn Krobath, Coraopolis, and Aubrey Murray, 17, of Pittsburgh.

Paul Feffer, 18, of Pittsburgh was in critical condition with a possible fractured skull, concussion and multiple cuts.

Paul Bezjak, watchman at the railroad crossing, said the driver of the car apparently did not hear the warning bell or see his signal. Parts of the automobile were hurled hundreds of feet in all directions. A jack was imbedded in the wall of a nearby house, and Harvey's body was found against the side of a house 100 feet from the crossing.

Wrecking crews were able to remove the demolished car only by hoisting it into the bed of the truck.

A Baltimore & Ohio Railroad spokesman said the train, the Columbian, was travelling at about 65 miles an hour as it approached the crossing. A maximum speed of 70 miles an hour is permitted in that area, he said.
